

I subscribe to XM radio, because commercial radio does not suit my music tastes nor does it offer the kind of traffic and weather information that I need. I live in the Los Angeles area and commute thru downtown everyday. Having up to date traffic when I need it is vital. It can make the difference between a one hour drive and a three hour drive.

Those who are willing to pay a price for such service should have the right to receive it, just as cable TV opens up rural areas to more entertainment and news. This too is a a subscription service.
